

Please leave the mudflats like this

Important Information for
Bait Collectors
in Poole Harbour

The collection of bait for fishing has taken place for hundreds of years. The public right to fish includes the right to collect bait for one's own use, although there is no public right to collect bait to sell commercially.

Increasing pressures around the coast make it more important that collectors follow guidelines in order to ensure bait collection can continue now, and in the future.

Produced by the Poole Harbour Steering Group

Supported by the

For further information please contact:

Southern IFCA
Tel: 01202 721373
Email: enquiries@southern-ifca.gov.uk

www.southern-ifca.gov.uk

Please don't leave holes like these

Bait collection can cause serious damage to the mudflats and wildlife in Poole Harbour

Treat the mudflats and the wildlife around Poole Harbour sensitively

Poole Harbour Steering Group ask

Bait Collectors

in Poole Harbour

Poole Harbour Special Protection Area (SPA)

“Please follow this code... it is in your interest!”

Take only what you need for your own use

Bait animals are an important food source for birds. Taking only what you need ensures stocks are available now and populations can thrive in the future.

Back-fill any holes that you dig

The waterlogged holes cannot be recolonised by invertebrates for weeks and this deprives birds of food. The holes also present a danger to other Harbour users.

Don't disturb birds and wildlife

Disturbance during the day, and from torch lights at night can prevent birds feeding or recovering from migratory flights.

Don't dig or drag in sensitive habitats

Saltmarsh and Eelgrass beds are important habitats and feeding areas for many creatures.

Poole Harbour is an internationally important site for the birds which feed on the mudflats.

It is important to follow these guidelines in order to ensure bait collection can continue now, and in the future.

